Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. § 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5, 9-14, 16 and 18-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b) as being anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Aardema et al (either one). Aardema et al discloses a control system including a closed loop control over the flow (e.g. column 6 line 60-64). Since a closed loop feedback generates a command signal based on a difference between an actual value and a desired value, and since a flow through a control valve is dependent on a pressure difference across and opening of the control valve; one of ordinary skill in the hydraulic control system art would recognize that the closed loop control over the flow would generate an estimated flow based on the pressure difference across and opening of the control valve, and the command signal based on the estimated flow and an actual flow, generated from a desired flow rate. If not, it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to one having ordinary skill in the art to do so.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. § 103 which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Subject matter developed by another person, which qualifies as prior art only under subsection (f) or (g) of section 102 of this title, shall not preclude patentability under this section where the subject matter and the claimed invention were, at the time the invention was made, owned by the same person or subject to an obligation of assignment to the same person.

Claims 6- 8, 15 and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103 as being unpatentable over Aardema et al (either one). Aardema et al discloses a system for controlling a flow through a valve and method of operating comprising pressure sensors (e.g. 305) monitoring a pressure drop (from 330) across the valve and a flow controller configured to determine a command signal (from 340) based on a desired flow rate (from 310) and estimated flow rate, based on the pressure drop and displacement of the valve (see discussion above); but does not disclose that pressure signals from the pressure sensors are subjected to a noise filter; or that the displacement of the valve is either measured by a valve position sensor or estimated based on a commands signal.

Official notice is taken that it is well known to use a noise filter, to filter out higher frequency noise from the pressure signals. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to one having ordinary skill in the art to use a noise filter, to filter out higher frequency noise from the pressure signals of Aardema et al.

Official notice is taken that it is well known to determine a displacement of a valve by either measuring using a valve position sensor or estimating based on a previous command signal. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to one having ordinary skill in the art to determine a displacement of the valve of Aardema et al by either measuring using a valve position sensor or estimated based on a previous command signal.
